County Clerk Jessie Horn has announced that July 1 is the deadline for payment of county occupational licenses by local businesses.

A penalty of 20 per cent of the license cost will be added to all bills paid after that date.

In clarifying a frequent misunderstanding of business owners at license time, Miss Horn said that the responsibility for paying fees on cigarette machines in an establishment rests with the establishment owner and not the owner of the machine.

Miss Horn also said county whiskey and beer licenses were due for renewal on July 1.

Hazard Delegation Will Go To Frankfort To Seek UK College

A large delegation of Hazardites will converge on Governor Edward T. Breathitt's office in Frankfort Thursday to seek his support in getting a University of Kentucky community college established here.

Led by Hazard banker Dewey Daniel, the group, which at present numbers 65, will travel by private car and will meet at 1 p. m. at the Governor's office.

Daniel said this afternoon that as many people as possible were encouraged to join the party.

"The whole town ought to close up and go see the man," Daniel said. "They've been fooling around too long with this thing."

"It would be one of the greatest things that ever happened to Hazard." If a UK extension were established here, Daniel added.

"The people are entitled to know if they're going to build a college here or not. We need it now, not five years from now."

The Thursday motorcade to Frankfort will mark the beginning of the second big push to attract a UK extension to Hazard.

Two years ago Hazard boosters went all out to convince the state government and UK officials that Hazard was the logical place to establish an extension in this region.

A survey by a committee of UK faculty members came up with the same conclusion, but Governor Bert Combs administration rejected the committee's recommendation and eventually based the decision to locate the college at Blackey because of what was publicly acknowledged to be a political obligation.

After the decision in favor of Blackey failed to materialize into actual construction of a college, the issue faded from the public limelight.

Earlier this year, at Hazard's annual Civic Night banquet at the VFW, University of Kentucky President John W. Oswald devoted much of his speech to stressing the important role community colleges will play in his plans for UK's future.

Colleges similar to the one the delegation will be seeking Thursday for Hazard are springing up all over the state.

The UK Southeast Center at Cumberland has been open for several years. A new one at Prestonsburg opens this fall. Somerset, Hopkinsville and Bardonia are other towns for which UK extensions are committed.

According to Dr. Oswald's statements here, UK definitely plans to establish such an institution in this region. He said the site has not yet been determined but that when it is, it will be selected on purely educational grounds.

The University has been offered, free of charge, a tract of land on Black Gold Hill adjoining the Hazard golf course.

Mrs. Townes to Give Baking Class

All Food Stamp Recipients scheduled to receive stamps from Krypton, Chavies, Busy and Yerkes on July 2nd are requested to report to the Perry County Health Department at 8:00 a.m. for a Baking Demonstration by the Perry County Home Demonstration Agent, Mrs. Cecile Townes.

Food Stamp Office will be open for issuance at 9:00 a.m.

FRONT PAGE EDITORIAL

A UK College In Hazard

Once again individuals in Hazard have an opportunity to affect materially the future of their region and the genuine uplifting of their community.

At one p. m. Thursday, Hazard citizens led by Mr. Dewey Daniel, will meet by appointment with Governor Breathitt in Frankfort to discuss the prospects of establishing a University of Kentucky community college in Hazard.

So far, 65 people have agreed to accompany Mr. Daniel to Frankfort, and this number ought to make an impressive crowd in the Governor's eyes. But if 65 people makes a firm impression, then 165 ought to make an indelible stamp upon the minds of the Governor and his assistants, one that would not be forgotten when the time for decision-making rolls around.

Why so many people? The answer is simple: one of the first things government agencies and institutions such as the University considers before it makes an investment in any community is the degree of local support that community is willing to make on its own behalf. Hazard has a good reputation as a go-getter town. But it cannot rest upon reputations made on past performances as a cohesive community. Even though it is utterly obvious to those of us who live in this region that Hazard is the logical place for a University extension, still we must work to convince others of this fact that we know so well. For in the uphill struggle for self-improvement, experience has shown that a community receives only what it goes out and gets.

A band of interested citizens will be going after that college this Thursday. As Mr. Daniel said, the whole town ought to close up for the day and join the party. With that as an impossibility, the town should at least send a body substantial enough in numbers that Frankfort will know it came, and why.

Mike Combs Off Again After South America Tour

A Hazard youth recently returned from a five month musical concert tour of South America is now a staff member at the National Music Camp at Interlochen, Michigan, where President Johnson's daughter Luci Baines and pianist Van Cliburn will appear as part of the summer program.

Mike Combs, 21 year old son of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Combs of Broadway in Hazard, left here ten days ago to report for his third summer at Interlochen after a visit with his parents that marked a brief lull in the busy travels of the young musician.

From January through May, Mike, a senior at the University of Illinois, toured ten countries in South America as a member of UI's Symphony Orchestra.

The tour was a United States State Department Cultural Affairs presentation designed to spread good will between other nations and our own.

Before it was over, Mike and his fellow musicians, 80 of them, had visited cities and rural areas in Mexico, Honduras, Nicaragua, Venezuela, Columbia, Brazil, Argentina, Chile, Peru and Bolivia.

The journey involved over 16,000 miles by air and many additional miles on side trips by bus and train into the South American countryside, during which the collegians presented an approximate total of 200 concerts to new friends south of the border.

Not all of these concerts involved the full orchestra. When the schedule did not call for a program of symphonic music, the group divided itself into five smaller ensembles which played separately.

Mike said his percussion ensemble played in several orphanages and hospitals, to many South Americans who had never been exposed to live orchestra music before.

"The people were very friendly," he said. "They were always more than willing to help us out."

The tour was not all music, however.

It involved much conversation with natives ("After four and half months I spoke enough Spanish to get by on") a bull fight and the inauguration of a president in Venezuela, and a revolution in Brazil.

The revolution was the one last April in which ex-presdent Goulart was ousted by a military coup.

"There were a lot of soldiers in the streets," Mike said. "And in some places it was recommended that we stay close to our hotels. But we were never in any immediate danger."

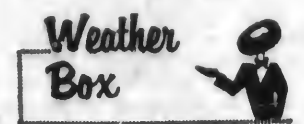

In addition to pleasant memories, Mike brought home some tangible proof of his South American journey.

His loot, most of it hand-made and purchased from native street-sellers, includes an alpaca poncho from Argentina, an alpaca sweater from Bolivia, several items of silver from Peru, copper dishware from Chile and a striking rug made of llama fur from Peru.

Another memento is a large map of South America, now mounted on a wall at home, with the routes of his trip marked in black.

A senior next year at Illinois, Mike is a music education major. He plans to teach music as a career.

He graduated from Hazard High School in 1961 where he was president of the band and Science Club, and editor of the student newspaper, On The Hill.

Souvenir of South America

One of the most striking mementos Mike Combs brought home from a tour of South America as a member of the University of Illinois symphony orchestra was this hand-made rug of llama fur. ## Yanks Edge 7-Up; Indians Lose No. 1

Coca Cola's Yankees fought back from a 5-0 Indian lead to hand Shockey Bowling's Indians their first setback of the 1964 season 8-7 Friday afternoon at Collins Field in seven innings.

7-Up scored three times in the first and two more runs in the second and commanded a comfortable 5-0 lead.

Coca Cola managed to tally three runs in their half of the third on two hits and two walks aided by an error and cut the Indian lead to 5-3.

The Yankees really went to work in the fifth. Four runs came across the plate for the Yankees as nine men went to bat that included four Yankee hits and a 7-5 Coca Cola lead.

The Indians failed to wilt in their last time at bat as 7-Up came up with two runs to tie the game at 7-7.

The Yankees then scored the winning run in the bottom of the seventh for an 8-7 victory. Two nice plays were made at home plate in the late innings by Barney Baker. Baker tagged out Juan Walters once while attempting to score and put the ball on Mike Combs the other instance.

COUNTY AGENT'S NOTES

Don't Plow Your Corn to Death

Paul Keen — County Agricultural Agent

Don't Plow your Corn to Death! Many a fine Saturday afternoon has been wasted by farm hands with steel beams working overtime in waist-high corn. What that "lay-by" operation did was to cut down the yield.

Plow your corn as shallow as possible to get the weeds and as few times as possible to keep it clean.

The roots on a corn stalk at 8 weeks of age are 4 feet to each side and 4 feet down. The deep roots are reaching for moisture, but the feeder roots to each side are after the fertilizer you put into the soil at planting time. These feeder roots grow right up to the surface at a distance of 2½ feet on each side of the stalk. This means they overlap in middles. Every feeder root that is cut greatly reduces your chances for top yield.

Picture what a deep furrow would do to them even if you plowed eighteen inches from row. Don't plow your corn to death.

In plowing corn, plow as shallow as possible and cultivate only to keep corn clean. Put more corn in your crib this fall. Controlling Common Insect Pests:

Camper - hikers - and naturalists beware! The chigger or red bug season is here. Survey shows 20% more belt-line scratching this week than last. Places to avoid include: berry patches, orchards, woodlands, margins of lakes, lawns, parks and golf courses—might as well be in jail as to stay away from those places. So here is the thing to do. Use repellants such as Off or 612 or 622. Pour repellent on hands, rub them together then rub lightly these areas: arms and legs if they are not covered by clothing, socks and stockings, especially the elastic bands, and waistbands of shirts, trousers and shorts. This treatment should give effective chigger control for several hours. Another suggestion is to take a good hot soapy bath or shower as soon as you return home; this will wash chiggers from your hair follicles or pores before they can insert their mouth parts in the skin. The pain and itching is apparently caused by the larva injecting a fluid into the skin to dissolve the tissue upon which it feeds. To determine if chiggers are present you might place a piece of black card-board edgewise on the ground. Observe it for a few minutes. If chiggers are present, they will climb to the top edge and congregate there. Make the test in about a dozen spots over the area. Pick out spots that have different kinds of cover, such as solid growths of grass, tufts of grass, dead leaves, and decaying twigs. Remember, you are a chigger hunter; you should be protected by a repellent. Some old timers like to dust ankles with dusting sulfur; it works too.

Aphids - Much of the new growth in hedges is infested with aphids, and unless they are controlled stunting and twisting of the plant foliage may result. Malathion (1 table-spoonful per gallon of water) will work well or Cygon may even be better since it is a systemic.

Fleas

If you were missed by the chiggers watch for the fleas. June and July seems to be the flea months and returning vacationers are sometimes met at the door by sub-leasees looking frantically for a free meal—you. As long as Fells and Canis are in the house, fleas are not much of a problem. It seems. Larvae are often present in pet sleeping quarters and during July they will change to adults. Unless a cat or dog (Fells or Canis) is circulating around the area the fleas will take to the road and inhabit other areas of the house. What can we do? Dusting the animal about every 2 weeks with DDT, lindane, methoxychlor or malathion should solve the problem. Read labels carefully. For the lucky returning vacationers try this. Let Fells and Canis run through all the rooms in the house a dozen times. Most of the fleas should have found their happy home by that time, then use dust treatment.

Oriental Roaches

The oriental roach is also called "waterbug" "black beetle" and "shad roach". It is dark brown, short winged and 1¼ inches long by ½ inch wide. They prefer mild temperatures and moist conditions as might be found in basements, crawl spaces, under houses with no basements, and cisterns. Favorite locations in the basement are the sump pump area, bathtubs, and floor drains. Residual sprays of DDT, or chlordane, or dieldrin or malathion or diazinon in the basement and some of the other area mentioned should solve the problem. Cisterns from which water is being used should not be treated. The area around buildings should also be treated. Dipterex 1% sugar bait is said to work also.
